Suppose a gang of robbers should rig up an aeroplane and, while hovering over some wealthy city, demand tribute with the alternative of blowing up or setting fire to the town with explosives or combustibles dropped from above—there is now absolutely no provision to prevent the carrying out of such a plan. Heretofore desperados have been among the first to adopt new inventions and use them in their nefarious business. In this case it looks like a comparatively easy proposition.

King Chulalongkorn of Siam and his forty wives are reported to be on the way to the United States by way of Honolulu. United States District Attorney Breckens of the Hawaiian capital is of opinion that to permit the king and his harem to land in American territory will be a violation of the law. Here is another tangle for the administration to unravel.

The announcement of Col. Cecil A. Lyon that the Republicans will have a state ticket in the field this year is good news to all true Democrats. If there were no candidates of their own party many would go into the Democratic primary and vote for Colquitt because he is a near-Republican, masquerading as a Democrat.

He who has such an exaggerated idea of his own importance as to believe that God needs his worship or is in any way benefited by it, is in no condition to worship acceptably. It is not God, but man, that is made better by worship.

Detroit is the latest city to institute an investigation of alleged municipal corruption, the alleged bribery being in connection with the issuance of liquor licenses. The demand for honest administration seems to prevail everywhere except in Philadelphia. Clean house, you scoundrels, or the people will get you.

The anti-pass law is to be credited with a great improvement in Texas newspapers and in the finances of Texas editors. As long as free passes could be had for the asking the temptation to neglect business and go gallivanting around here, there and everywhere was too strong for the average editor.

There has been heavy betting on almost every important event, from the Jeffries-Johnson mill to the breaking up of the ice on Youkon river, but no wagers on the disastrous or harmless effects of passing through the comet's tail have been reported.

In an address before the Canadian Press Association at Toronto, Henry Watterson characterized as "brutal" the publicity given by some newspapers to the private affairs of prominent people. It is not only brutal but also disgusting. Readers who enjoy such literature have prurient tastes.

The Brazos County Boys' Corn club rally ought to be a hummer. Every boy in Brazos county should realize that in a few years the fabric of government, of society, of religion and of all the institutions and industries will rest on the shoulders of such as he.

Fort Worth business men are kicking about ballyhoo music on the streets in front of moving picture shows and other places of amusement. It takes rawhide nerves to endure machine-made music, so-called, such as an electric piano or a phonograph.

The American Cotton Manufacturers' association, now in convention at Charlotte, gives it out that owing to new price levels cotton goods will go higher. When cotton gets to be as costly as silk aristocrats will proudly wear cotton sox.

The Amorilla News blabs out what everybody knows but didn't like to say so bluntly. The News says: "The trouble with six-shooters is that they so frequently take up with fools and cowards." There, now, you've got it straight from the shoulder

Now we all know that most of the comet literature that has been burdening the columns of many newspapers for several weeks is pure rot.

The president is explaining why he exonerated Ballinger. Next thing, he will have to explain his explanation.

Some people are so comet-struck that they can smell the gas of its tail.
